Comments from the Corner Office

As I'm sure you are aware, the Trump administration is recommending comprehensive tax reform that could be the biggest change in tax planning since the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

Future tax changes are expected, however nothing has changed yet relating to 2017. Right now the proposals are very broad and will certainly change by the time Congress debates and passes any legislation. Once enacted, it can take years for the IRS to issue regulations to clarify some of the points of a Tax Reform Act.

At this time we are not recommending any significant entity changes or changes in tax planning until we have enacted legislation. Professional Corporations have historically been taxed differently than other corporations and it is too early to tell whether they will be included in some of the proposals.

We will continue to monitor the potential tax changes throughout 2017 and notify our clients of any necessary changes. If there is sweeping tax reform, there will be opportunities to be implemented immediately and others to be implemented over time. As always, tax planning will need to be tailored to each client's individual situation.

Please feel free to call us if you have any questions or would like to discuss your tax planning strategies.
